City passes 'Second Call' ordinance, can now assess costs for disturbing the peace

Even in the absence of the Lemon Grove Review (whose publisher was out of town for his 35th high school reunion), and without the presence of Council-members Bob Burns and Lois Heiserman, the Lemon Grove City Council met last Monday night.

Council heard an appeal from Silewa S. Georges requesting relief from certain standards imposed by the Planning Commission.

Last May, Georges, the owner of Grove Market, obtained a license to sell packaged liquor and began selling liquor before obtaining a minor use permit. When he was informed that this permit was required, he submitted an application which was approved on Aug. 9.

Georges then submitted an appeal to the Planning Commission requesting that he be exempt from conditions which would limit the type of wine and "distilled spirits" he could sell, as well as require all his displays of such beverages to be located not more than five feet from the store entrance.

The Commission held a public hearing in which Mr. Georges agreed to comply with the display requirement, but still objected to the other requirements. Therefore, he appealed the Commission's decision to the Council.

Council voted to set a public hearing on the matter for Nov. 19.

In other business, the Council approved a deferred compensation plan for city employees. The plan will, according to the resolution, "enable (the City) to provide reasonable retirement security for its employees."

In other action, the council awarded the bid for the Senior Center flooring to La Mesa Carpet.

Also, Richard Clarno, who last month appealed a decision by the council to deny his request for flood damage compensation of $2,900, was granted that claim. This reversal followed an investigation which concluded that the flooding of Clarno's property on Roy Street was caused by a blocked drain inlet on Meadow Lane, combined with the heavy rainstorm and other environmental factors. Although the City accepted no responsibility for the flooding, it decided that the least expensive and best alternative in "the interest of good community relations" was that Clarno should be paid.

Also, the council adopted the ordinance which will allow the city to charge residents for the cost of sending out law enforcement personnel a second time the same evening to a loud party or gathering which is "disturbing the peace."

Lions launch 20th annual sight preservation program in elementary schools

Last Tuesday morning, about 150 Golden Avenue Elementary School students - 1st through 3rd graders - lined up for vision screenings provided annually by the Lemon Grove Lions Club.

This is the 20th year that the Lions Club has offered the Sight Preservation Program, a countywide program created in part by Dr. Jerome Legerton of Lemon Grove Vision Care.

Dr. Kevin Reeder, who practices in Rancho Penasquitos with Dr. Legerton, examined the students.

"The purpose of the vision screenings is to find the children who are in the most urgent need of help. The screening is not intended to be a substitute for a professional examination, even if the child passes the screening test," Dr. Reeder said.

These screenings will be given in all six Lemon Grove elementary schools.

Dr. Legerton, a Lions Club member, was instrumental in getting the screening program started. Each year, the Lions Club raises funds to help finance the volunteer optometrists of the San Diego County Optometry Association who perform these services.

The optometrists look for visual problems and perform several tests. About 18 percent of the students examined each year have a sight problem, and are advised to visit their own optometrist for treatment or correction.

"Less than three percent of the children from lower and middle-income families ever have their eyes examined," said Dr. Legerton. "Children born with defective vision don't know that they have a problem because they don't know what normal vision is," he added.

Sheriff's log to return

Due to vacations by Jack Miller (our purveyor of "bad news" at the Sheriff's Station), and the Review's failure to follow through with picking up the information, the crime log has not appeared for six weeks.

Miller is due back next week, and we will get with him to get the information started again. We'll go back to the date last published, so you won't miss one dirty trick.

B-words

Personal comments of Councilman Bob Burns

San Francisco

While we would like to think that our town, Lemon Grove, has everything - it does not. True, we have the "Best Climate on Earth," but our size just precludes the big hotels and really fabulous restaurants. I am always painfully aware of this fact when we visit "The City," San Francisco. The Hilton, the Nikko and the Hyatt are very plush, and the Ernies the Aliotos, Scomas, and Iron Horse are fantastic places to eat, and of course, very expensive. However, we encountered a place that I feel worth mentioning because it is not only pleasurable but also reasonable in price. For those who can qualify it is certainly something that one should become aware of, if not already. We always try to take advantage of it when in "The City."

It is called the Marines Memorial Club, and it is located just up the hill from Union Square on the corner of Mason and Sutter streets. Membership costs $50 per year and one must be an ex-Marine or have served with the Corps in an ancillary capacity such as Navy Medical attachment or similar status.

Regular membership allows use of the hotel facilities including the Skyroom Restaurant. Originally, the hotel building was owned by the San Francisco Woman's Club and it was sold to the Marines Corps Reserve at the close of WWII. It has undergone extensive remodeling and is a first-class hotel. While the Skyroom is not comparable in height as some of the others, its (top) 12th floor overlooks a fine view of the Bay, a piece of Treasure Island, the Oakland Bridge, and the Tenderlion district below.

The rooms start at $60-$65 for a single/double occupancy, and the suites go for $125. Our favorite is the "John Basilone" suite with three rooms and all of the amenities one could ask for to entertain or just to enjoy lavish living. These prices are right at one-half of what we are charged for comparable facilities elsewhere in downtown San Francisco.

The restaurant situation is similar. The first night Jackie and I had dinner at Aliotos, our favorite on the Wharf. We enjoyed a nice meal with a tab of $58. The following night we ate in the Skyroom. I had the "Gunnery Sergeants" cut of prime rib, and Jackie had a Salmon entree, both much better meals than those the previous evening, and for $37. There is, of course, a very pleasant library/museum dedicated to the Corps, as should be expected, and they also have a very nice theater with quality productions on a continuing basis. The location is a short, invigorating walk of two blocks to the Hilton, Nikko, etc. Just show your card in the lobby and enjoy, but advance reservations are required, and short notice will probably get you short shrift, because it is a popular place.

You may think that the only reasons I go to the meetings is for those listed above, but that is not entirely true. The League of California Cities brings all of the knowledge and experiences of its member jurisdictions together for mutual benefit. Legislation that affects us is always a popular topic. Gov. Pete graced us with his presence and gave an encouraging speech. Workshops on every subject and every facet of cityhood were available and were high in quality. We always come away with some new wrinkle - or even an old one, for that matter - that can be used to benefit our citizens and help us do a better job.

In Lemon Grove, we don't bounce checks, fix tickets or eat free. Your City Council does not spend money frivolously, and there are three of us from City Hall who belong to the MMC. Aside from hearing the shout, "Semper Fi," a lot and having the sumptuous breakfasts given names like, "Globe and Anchor," even an ex-sailor, like me, can somehow fit in.

I would advise anyone who makes a couple of trips each year to San Francisco to investigate a membership in the Marines Memorial Club.

Trolley Thoughts

As a member of the Metropolitan Transit Development Board (MTDB), I have been involved with the light rail line that we call, "the trolley," for about ten years. I was present at the inaugural run of the South line, and participated in the dedication of the Euclid extension, and finally, the completion of the East line into El Cajon. It seemed like a tedious and difficult task at the time, but we now know that it was virtually a breeze. Compared to what we are encountering in the presently proposed continuations of South line to Old Town, and East line to Santee.

Having purchased the entire San Diego, Arizona and Eastern Railway, company, land, rolling stock and rails, for a paltry 18 million dollars, the problems were only those of mitigation of impacts along the right of way. This, of course, was and always will be, a very difficult and expensive part of the project. What we had little to be concerned with was the purchase of land on which to lay the tracks. There were parking lots to add, and in some cases, land for operations, maintenance, and for double-tracking. Compared to now, it was relatively easy to do, and few feathers were ruffled. Now, it is a different ball game. The routes of the future almost all have to be laid out on privately-owned land, and, in some cases, where extensive development has already occurred.

Locating a rail line near one's property can cause impacts that run the entire gamut from very beneficial to what is perceived as very bad. Property speculation occurs and sometimes hastily-planned improvements are used to jack the price up where the possibility of eminent domain may be exercised.

It is amazing how many angles there are to providing the much-needed mass transit service, and, of even more wonderment, the diversity of purpose that assails such projects. It is certainly no one's intent to run roughshod over anyone, and it has been my experience that MTDB is one of the kindest and gentlest governmental agencies in such matters. No one is ever totally happy, but within the bounds of reason, they are quite successful in coming to agreement with property owners. The overlying fact, of course, is that we are trying to make the money go as far as possible. When you must think of a mile of track costing millions of dollars, the money must be husbanded carefully. My simple arithmetic tells me that we can build two miles of track, at $10 million per, for $20 million. If it costs $20 million per, we can only build one mile. The future planning that is on the drawing boards now, includes two Mission Valley sections to link Old Town up with the East line, routes up Highway 5 and the Highway 15 corridor. And, there is even talk now about a possible rail line south from East County to the South Bay and Otay Mesa. This will take money, and MTDB is committed to squeeze every linear foot of rail line that it can for the dollar.

Some communities seem to be taking an overly parochial stand on the extensions and it is hoped that this will not be the norm of the future. The most important thing to realize is that the mass transit systems are the only things that will get people out of their cars and off the highways. We must clean up our air, we must decrease our dependence on foreign oil, and we must do something to make our highways last longer. Mass transit answers all of these demands and has proven itself in San Diego to where we are a showcase for the entire country. Our light rail system is the envy of all other jurisdictions. We have the best fair box recovery rate in the nation. Our scheduling is almost flawless, and our safety record is very good. The honor system does allow a few ticket cheaters to slip through the cracks, but less than one percent rides free. Our rates are low compared to other jurisdictions, and the system is very proud of being fiscally responsible in that there is no deficit financing. Our seniors and students get the biggest bargain in the country with special passes, as do our disabled. MTDB staff is constantly working to improve service, cut costs, and maintain the fine record of performance that has been attained.

Try riding the trolley next time you go downtown, and you will be pleasantly surprised - plus, you will be helping to clean up the environment and not be part of the gridlock occurring on our highways daily. Try it, you'll like it.

If you have questions or suggestions for Dr. Burns, send them to P.O. Box BB, Lemon Grove, CA 91946.

Commentary

by Paul Treske

It's all over now.

A follow-up story appears on page 17 of the daily paper. A few columns still show up on the Op-Ed pages, but, after all, someone shot a lot of people in Texas, and that's news.

But, there are troublesome issues remaining in the Clarence Thomas affair, even as the judge prepares to don his Supreme Court robes. Aside from the never-to-be resolved issue of who was indeed telling the truth, there are questions raised by the tone and nature of the proceedings themselves that ought to be discussed.

The savagery of the White House-orchestrated assault on Anita Hill, together with the failure of the Judiciary Committee Democrats to defend, and, in turn, searchingly question Thomas, is a sad and ominous piece of business. Senator Specter's repeated use of the word perjury without any proof was legalistic bullying at its best. More disturbing, was the picture of Wyoming's Alan Simpson making repeated reference to documents in his brief case - never produced - that would "prove" that Hill's corroborating witnesses were untruthful. This was truly shades of the unlamented late Senator Joe McCarthy who would brandish a brief case full of so-called "proofs" that he also never produced. For those who wondered aloud why Hill had remained silent for ten years, the carnivorous attack on her sanity, morality and veracity should leave little doubt as to why she and a multitude of others fail to "come forward" and complain.

Lest, however, we view this as only a one-party mess, the performance on the other side of the aisle was equally disgusting. Chairman Biden, apparently still stung by his bout with plagiarism, was endlessly talkative, but did little to question Thomas or attempt to protect Hill, who was, after all, basically the Democrat's witness.

Ted Kennedy, late of Chappaquidick and Palm Beach, at least had the grace to squirm uncomfortably when matters of morality were raised, but did little else.

Senator Leahy tried, but was smiling and gentle; Heflin of Alabama seemed a dodger, and Simon was too busy being nice. All of them were so careful not to challenge anybody that they seemed to disappear, leaving Hatch, Specter and Simpson to dominate the floor.

A few loose ends

In short, Anita Hill didn't stand a chance. Looking at the committee's Democrats, one can easily see why they haven't won the White House in a dozen years - and have no prospects for the future.

Much has been said negatively about the process itself. Why was it public instead of private? Why did there seem to be so few rules? Why was there so much irrelevant speechmaking? The key lies most certainly in the last question. In reality, the hearing process itself was, in my estimation, appropriate. When questions regarding high degrees of personal impropriety are raised publicly, they must be dealt with publicly - thus, there was no other realistic avenue for the committee but to hold a public hearing. But, since the appointment of Thomas was a purely political one, it must follow that "politics as usual" would be the order of the day.

"Politics" means self-serving speeches, posturing for the "home folks," and, above all, an adversarial party versus party confrontation. Since it was "politics," it followed that those in opposition to the appointment would seek an Anita Hill to attempt a derailment. Since it was "politics," it followed that the White House would pull out every stop to keep it on track. Thus, the spectacle of a group of so-called leaders bickering, threatening, posturing and making all-round fools of themselves was inevitable.

Lest, however, we think we can elect candidates who are better and nobler, remember this: We get what we pay for! These senators are us - bickering, posturing and fighting among ourselves. They are no better, no worse, only more savvy in the ways of government. We put them in office and we keep them there. And, if the polls are a true indication, the majority of us really wanted Anita Hill "put in her place."

So, after all, the hearings are just what we wanted, as was the result. And, the next time something like this happens, it will be the same. So, let's stop complaining about what our legislators do on TV. They're just playing to their audience - us! And doing a damn good job of it, as well!

Time to reconsider life's priorities

by Joseph Walker

While most of America was watching Clarence Thomas vs. Anita Hill on TV recently, I was watching my sister - a dignified, 53-year-old grandmother - climb a tree.

It may not have been the politically correct thing to do, considering all the heat that was being generated in Washington, D.C. at the time. But, I don't know - it was such a beautiful autumn Saturday and my brothers and sisters were together for the first time in who-knows-how-long, and that tree was so inviting ...

So, we all climbed it - all eight of us. Then, we went to the grade school many of us attended, and that big, open field out back practically forces us to line up and race each other like we used to - only slower. Then, we went to the park where we used to play, and we played. And, we laughed ... and we talked ... and we laughed some more.

And, somehow, the Thomas-Hill affair managed to move along nicely (well, Ok, not-so-nicely) without us. The day's football games were played without much attention from us. The stores were filled and business was conducted without any meaningful contribution from the Walkers. The world moved on, even though we chose to ignore it.

And you know what? The world survived - and so did we.

When we returned to reality Monday morning, the world was still there waiting for us. But, we were able to face it refreshed and revitalized, with a tree trunk-full of happy family memories that will warm the heart for a lifetime.

I've been thinking about that weekend ever since, and I've been wondering how many similar opportunities I've missed simply because I felt I was "too busy." In each case, I could honestly reply that, "I would really, truly, love to, but I just don't have the time right now - maybe later." But, deep down inside of me, I know that I could have spent a few minutes here or there if I had wanted to badly enough.

I mean, if someone came up to me and said, "We'll give you $10 million if you'll just go home and read a couple of stories to Elizabeth," somehow, I think I would have found the time.

It's all a matter of priority, isn't it? We can always find time for the things that really matter to us - an emergency meeting at the office, for example, or even a round of golf. But, other important things are often left undone because they don't happen to be high enough on our list of short-term priorities.

Sadly, the commitments that are the easiest to put off - to family, friends - are often the ones that matter most. Sure, I can play football with Joe tomorrow, but maybe he won't ask me tomorrow. Or, maybe, by the time I'm ready to play with him, he's going to decide that he's too busy to play with me.

"Hold it right there!" some of you are saying. "Enough of this guilt!" I work hard to provide for my family. Everything I do is for them, so they can have food to eat a comfortable home to live in, nice clothes to wear, a few luxuries to enjoy. I'd be happy to quit working so hard if they'd be happy with less."

Please don't misunderstand I'm not saying that you should quit your job or become less effective at it so you can spend eight hours a day playing with your family and helping neighbors and friends. For most of us, our work, is a significant part of our lives and it deserves its high-priority status.

But, I am saying that there are other things that also deserve their place among our priorities and that we can find time for them if we really try. Just as there is a time for seriousness and work, there is also a time for silliness and play. There is a time to pay careful attention to what's going on in the world and a time to let it take a couple of spins without any help from you. There's at least a little time for almost everything - if it's important enough to you to make the time.

Even if you have to climb a tree to find it.

Moonlighting

by Frank Andrews

When the Japanese bombed Pearl Harbor, which was the start of WWII, I was attending service school for the Addressograph-Multigraph Corporation in Euclid, Ohio, a suburb of Cleveland. After graduation, I was placed in Detroit, Michigan, to service all of their office equipment located in that area. It was a very thrilling experience for me as most of my customers were the automobile plants turned defense contractors.

Shortly after my brief stint in Detroit, I was called to active duty in the Army Air Corp Cadet Program. After completing Basic Training at Sheppard Field in Wichita Falls, Texas, I attended the University of Arkansas at Fayetteville.

As soon as my young bride and baby daughter back home in Minnesota found out about all the pretty coeds on campus with the shortage of young men they rushed down by Greyhound to live near me. Even with all the strict Cadet regulations and class "giggling," I believe that this period was the most enjoyable of my entire Army career.

My next step in the Cadet training was the move to a B25 base at Pampa, Texas. It was hard to decide whether the wife and small baby should follow to this unknown oil town especially as broke as we were at the time. "We'll follow by bus and if it becomes too much of a hardship we can always go back home," she said in a kind of pleading way.

I was confined to quarters, due to a special two-week quarantine on my squadron, so I couldn't even see my little family for what seemed like an eternity at the time. They stayed in the local hotel until I could resurrect something a little cheaper. As housing was very short in this town at that particular time, we settled for a rebuilt chicken coop for $15 per month. "At least it's freshly painted and clean. We'll gladly take it," she insisted.

After a couple months of goofing off (playing cards and snoozing) in those B25 bombers which seemed huge in those days I got sick of this lull in the training program. I finally got an audience with the C.O. and poured out my heart to him. "I want to do something more constructive with my time."

He looked up my civilian service record and responded loud and clear, "The head of our business equipment service department for the entire field was just shipped overseas, so we're in desperate need of his replacement."

I was excited but scared as the only business equipment that I had ever worked on, or was trained on, was Addressographs. Now I would have a couple G.I.s working under me and I didn't know anything. I bluffed my way and took a different machine manual home each night to study.

I must have snowed the Captain with my line, as he gave me a Jeep to drive for pick-up and delivery. I also conned a buddy in the P.X. offices to let me service all of their equipment for a monthly fee. The much needed money was starting to come in now, with my wife working six days a week at the Post Exchange.

I became so confident of my abilities that I convinced the owner of the Pampa Office Supply Company to let me repair and service his equipment at night. I would work at the base shop during the day and then rush home, eat supper, change into my fatigues, and walk to the Pampa Supply place. The boss would lock me in until I finished up and then I would leave, slamming the door behind me. One night, I was picked up by the M.P.s for being out on the streets after curfew and also for being out of uniform. After a stiff reprimand from the C.O., I was back in business again.

I didn't get to see my lovely little family very much, but we were paying our way without any help from the folks. We were well on our way to the future of bigger and better times.

Local writers club to hold annual awards night

Showcase Writers Club will hold its 25th annual awards night in the Ben Polak Fine Arts Auditorium (Lamplighter's Theatre), 8053 University Avenue, La Mesa, at 7 p.m. on Oct. 27.

The evening will honor entrants in a countywide contest held from March 1 to June 25. First, second and third place trophies in each category are awarded. Three honorable mention certificates are presented to runners up. Categories include fiction, articles, poetry (both serious and humorous) and stories for children.

Win or lose, entrants may still see their work in print in an attractive book, "Annual Showcase." An interesting local event in San Diego County is chosen as a theme for the book. This year, Showcase salutes the 75th birthday of the San Diego Zoo.

"One of the purposes of our awards night is to introduce these books to the public," said Showcase President Everett Lucas. The book sells for $6 per copy, or ten books for $50.

Bob Dillon, representing the San Diego Zoo, will be the featured speaker of the evening, sharing anecdotes from the zoo's history.

This was Grossmont's night

Thirteen years is a long time without a victory over a traditional rival, but for the Grossmont Foothillers, the drought ended last Friday night with a convincing 28-14 victory over arch-rival, Helix.

With the victory came a commanding grip on the Grossmont 3A title and a return - at long last - of the "Musket," the symbol of La Mesa city high school supremacy.

The Hillers' offensive means of victory seemed simple enough: give the ball to running back Jason Eskridge and block some holes for him. Eskridge did the rest - running, squirming or bulling his way to 200 yards and four touchdowns before being removed for dizziness midway through the third period.

On defense, the Hillers rushed and harassed Highlander quarterback Greg Wilbur, causing his poorest performance in two years at Helix. Wilbur completed only 8 of 23 passes, had 5 intercepted.

In fact, had Grossmont been able to change the rules so as to avoid kicking off, they might have shut down Helix entirely. Both Helix scores were rung up by kickoff returns, first by Andreal Climon who ran 80 yards in the opening period, and then by Keith Harrison who returned one 65 yards just before the half.

Otherwise, it was almost all Grossmont - or to be more specific, Jason Eskridge. The stocky 180-lb. runner capped a sixty-yard drive from the opening kickoff by scoring from five yards out and then put the Hillers ahead for good, late in the period.

Carrying the leather exclusively after a Grossmont interception at the Helix 45, Eskridge went in from the 12 to put his team up 13-7.

An interception by tackle Ken Loncar shortly before the half set up a 36-yard drive with Eskridge scoring from the two. Only 50 seconds remained in the half, but Helix narrowed the margin to 20-14.

The second half was all Grossmont. A fourth Eskridge TD early in the third period followed by a two-point Karlo to Heinrichs pass were the final points after which the Hillers' defense did the rest.

A jubilant Grossmont Head Coach Judd Hulbert gave full credit to his staff: "The coaching staff did a good job. We had a good game plan and it worked well on both sides of the line."

Lutherans offer peace and friendship Manassa's Sweety Pies Grand Opening

Reformation Sunday at Lemon Grove Lutheran Church will be celebrated in a slightly different way this year at the usual 9 a.m. service.

Oct. 27 will also mark what members are calling "Friendship Sunday" at the local church at 2055 Skyline Drive. Stewart Barnard, chairman of the Evangelism Committee at the church, said that "with all the strife and struggles that are in our world, people need to have a quiet center of peace. We're here for those who need that center." At the service itself, the Children's Choirs, the Youth Choir, the Chancel and the Bell Choirs will provide special music. The youth are participating in the sense that each one will bring one to the service.

Friends, families, youth and neighbors are all invited to share in this special service and the reception on the lawn after the service. Barnard said, "The fellowship and discussion will create opportunities to meet new friends and to share your hopes and dreams with others." The Rev. E.J. Volkmann also urged people to participate - especially, if they have no permanent church home. "We are all so fragmented by work, worries and the tendency to not want to get involved with others, that we need this time to savor the warmth of just being with others who accept us as we are and welcome us to fellowship." He added that he hoped visitors who are passing through our city will also feel welcome to attend services and get to know the members of the congregation.

"We are a friendly church group," he added with a smile.

Kiwanians pack 'em up and move 'em out

If you move quickly, you may still find some delicious Kiwanis apples on the corner of Olive and Broadway. The Club is working hard to sell a truckload just in from Washington.

Seniors invited to drop in

The Lemon Grove Seniors will meet on Oct. 28 at 11 a.m. in the Congregational UCC Church hall.

Bring a sack lunch; coffee, tea and cookies will be provided. After the meeting, there will be a sing-along of old tunes to parodies.

Fatigued persons support group

The Chronic Fatigue Syndrome (CFS) Network Support Group of San Diego meets the second Tuesday of the month at Grossmont Gardens Retirement Center, 5480 Marengo Drive, from 1 to 3 p.m.

Inquires are invited; call 442-8667, after 11 a.m. daily.

Chamber members and other guests celebrated the grand opening of Manassa's on Oct. 4. The fire truck was representative of Cassandra's husband Charles' occupation - he's a Captain with the City of San Diego.

Grossmont hyperbaric techs certified

La Mesans Bill Gossett, Patty Franson and Jerry McClure are among an elite group. They are among 45 people in the nation to pass the first hyperbaric certification test offered in the United States.

McClure, program coordinator of Grossmont Hospital's Hyperbaric Department, said the certification procedure assures that a hyperbaric technician has a high level of knowledge and the ability to deliver a high quality of care to patients.

The testing is administered by the National Board of Diving and Hyperbaric Medical Technology. "Eventually, hyperbaric techs will have to be certified to be hired," stated McClure. Technicians will have to be recertified every two years.

"One of the elements of certification is ongoing professional education, learning the newest equipment, treatments and procedures.

But since there are only 800 hyperbaric techs in the country, and very few hospitals with chambers, it's tough to find those educational programs," McClure added.

McClure, Gossett and Franson all reside in La Mesa. Other members of the hyperbarics team at Grossmont must also live close to the hospital. "Since the chamber must be available 24 hours a day, our personnel must be able to be at the hospital and ready to work within 30 minutes of receiving an emergency call," McClure explained.

Grossmont Hospital has the largest hyperbaric chamber in San Diego County. The chamber uses pressurized oxygen to treat diving accident victims, carbon monoxide poisoning victims and to heal wounds and infections.
